Dear Farm Fresh Consumer:

Who are we to argue with Daniel Webster? Years before Bucks County was founded in 1682, farmers had begun scratching out a living from its fertile, rolling lands. And even as those agrarian origins diversified into a civilization of craftsmen, businesses, prospering towns, industries, educators, professionals and, yes, plentiful artists - our farming heritage has endured and prospered.

We celebrate this heritage by joining again with the Penn State Cooperative Extension and our innovative farming community to bring you the 2019 edition of “Fresh from Bucks County Farms.” In it you will find a roadmap to the producers and purveyors of the bounty that our farmers are ready to share with local residents and visitors alike.

Featured in this directory are more than 50 farms, orchards, wineries and farm markets where you can find a vast array of fresh fruits and vegetables, quality meats and poultry, organic and u-pick options, agritainment and educational opportunities, and holiday staples such as pumpkins, fresh turkeys and Christmas trees.

Delve deeper into these pages and find lists of Community Supported Agriculture (CSA) farms that you can support and enjoy, as well as area restaurants that specialize in farm-to-table cuisine with locally sourced ingredients. If you're not hungry or browsing a recipe book after reading this publication, there's something wrong.

We in Bucks County government have long recognized the importance of farming to our economy, our history, and our special allure to visitors who are just discovering what a beautiful county we inhabit. The county has gone to great lengths to protect these lands from unrestrained development.

Our Agricultural Land Preservation Program has preserved 220 farms to date, comprising more than 17,000 acres. As a result, Bucks County remains easy on the eyes for those who travel its rural roads, and a great way for the public to help preserve this natural beauty is to support those who make their living from the land.

We therefore encourage you to visit the farms and other locations listed in this edition. You can look up many of them online or on social media to find out even more. Congratulations to the Penn State Cooperative Extension and our Bucks County farms for this excellent guide!

Sincerely,

Robert G. Loughery

When tillage begins, other arts follow. The farmers, therefore, are the founders of human civilization.

All universities engage in research and teaching. However the nation's more than 100 land-grant colleges and universities have a third critical mission:

Extension

Extension means reaching out and, along with teaching and research, land-grant institutions, such as Penn State, “extend” their resources and solve public needs with college or university resources through non-formal, non-credit programs. These programs are administered through county and regional extension offices, which bring land-grant expertise to the most local of levels.

Penn State Extension’s mission is to enhance quality of life by providing informal outreach educational opportunities to individuals, families, businesses, and communities throughout the Commonwealth.

Farms pay a small fee to be included in this guide. This guide does not represent all farms in Bucks County, only those choosing to participate and have products available for retail sale. Information listed in this guide is provided by the participating farmers. If you have questions about production methods or other farm details, contact the individual farmer. Buckingham Valley Vineyards & Winery

Buckingham Valley Vineyards and Winery is a small family owned and operated business dedicated to growing the best possible Bucks County wines. Founded in 1966, it is one of Pennsylvania’s first farm wineries. Wine production has grown from less than a thousand gallons in the early seventies to over 35,000 gallons a year, with fermenting and aging capacity of over 75,000 gallons. The original five-acre site has, through several acquisitions, expanded to over forty acres.

The growing conditions for grapes in Bucks County rival some of the best in the world. Fertile, well drained limestone soil, moderate year-round temperatures and a good average monthly rainfall allow the winery to produce consistent drinkable wines that appeal to many people. Grapes are harvested through September and early October with a French made mechanical harvester, which gently shakes the ripe grapes off the vines and deposits them into a stainless gondola. Because the Vineyard and Winery are on the same site, this method allows the fruit to be picked in cool early morning then processed within minutes., ensuring the highest possible quality.
Winemaking is both an art and a science. Buckingham Valley combines both traditional old-world methods with state-of-the-art production and processing facilities to produce the best wines possible. You will find almost two dozen varieties of wine at the winery, ranging from deep colored oak aged reds to light bodied whites. Still, sparkling and fortified. Very dry to deliciously sweet. Mostly from grapes, but also from apples, strawberries, raspberries and blackberries.

The Winery is open year-round and offers self-guided tours, where you can browse and taste wine at your own pace. A $5 per person tasting fee includes tasting of at least eight wines of your choice. They also offer a Champagne tasting flight that includes 3 champagne tastings of your choice for $5. There are picnic tables, a spacious lawn, and occasional live music on the weekends. Wine can be purchased by the glass, bottle or case.

This award-winning, seasonal market, located in the center of historic downtown Perkasie, has a focus on local farms and food producers with a few spots for homemade, homespun local crafters. You’ll find a wide variety of fresh vegetables, fruits and herbs, pastured free range chicken, pork (meats and charcuterie) and beef, fresh eggs, honey, mushrooms, cheese and dairy, preserves, salsas, syrups, sauces, butters, baked goods, Turkish pastries and salads. Adult visitors can stock up on local wines, spirits and Free Will beers and ciders. A small number of craft vendors bring soaps and skincare, market totes and carefully curated handmade items.

The market’s loyalty punch card rewards frequent shoppers with prizes donated by local businesses. Visitors can pick up a card from the market or Perkasie’s Borough Hall. Live music weekly and a full calendar of special events make Perkasie’s community Farmers’ Market a fun morning for the whole family. Make sure to stroll around the town’s independent retailers and cafes when you visit.

Since 2006, the nonprofit Bucks County Foodshed Alliance (BCFA) has worked to improve consumers’ access to fresh, healthy, local food and to build a resilient local food system through connection, education and collaboration.

We CONNECT through the Wrightstown Farmers’ Market (see listing #50), the Doylestown Farmers’ Market (see listing #11) and the BCFA online local food guide at bucksfoodshed.org.

We EDUCATE and raise awareness through popular BCFA farm tours, how-to workshops, chef demos and a range of presentations; including a Speakers Bureau.

We COLLABORATE and develop vital relationships with local partners, including Penn State Extension, farmers, retailers, educators, healthcare providers, restaurants and government.

We hope you’ll join us!

Be sure to visit bucksfoodshed.org to sign up for BCFA’s newsletter and stay in-the-know about local fresh food opportunities, the annual 5K Run & Family Fun Walk, and our annual appeal letter.

The spotted lanternfly is an invasive insect that has spread throughout southeastern Pennsylvania since its discovery in Berks County in 2014. This pest presents a significant threat to Pennsylvania’s forests, yards and gardens, agriculture, and recreational facilities and activities.

Do your part to protect our state treasures!
Before you leave a quarantined area, check for the spotted lanternfly (or its egg masses) on your car and on picnic and recreational gear.

If you see it, kill it! For more information on the spotted lanternfly, the quarantined area, and how to manage the pest on your property, visit: extension.psu.edu/spotted-lanternfly.
