About the Tile Works

Henry Chapman Mercer (1856-1930) established the Moravian Pottery and Tile Works during the fall of 1898 in an effort to preserve pre-industrial pottery traditions and to promote his ideas about making tiles by hand. Constructed of hand-mixed, poured-in-place concrete, the present Tile Works was built between 1911 and 1912 to replace an earlier structure that served as Mercer's first tile factory.

Today, the Moravian Pottery and Tile Works is owned by the County of Bucks and is operated as a "working history" museum by the Department of Parks and Recreation, Division of Historic Properties. Our purpose is to preserve, collect, and interpret the significance of this National Historic Landmark. Since 1974, tile production has been reactivated and has remained a part of our public interpretation of the site. Reissued tiles are made in a manner similar to those originally created by Mercer. The Tile Works maintains a vast historic collection of original tiles, plaster molds, tile-making tools, drawings, records and documents that tell the story of this important proponent of the American Arts and Crafts Movement.
